

DISCLAIMER AND LEGAL INFORMATION

The following provisions apply to any consultation of the FCGB website. As a result of consulting the website, the visitor accepts the conditions of this disclaimer. The FCGB may change the information unilaterally at any time.

These conditions are governed by Belgian law. Any disputes will fall under the jurisdiction of the Brussels courts.

GENERAL DISCLAIMER

The FCGB posts information on its website to let the public know about its activities. The content is published on the website for information purposes only. The FCGB does its utmost to ensure that this information is comprehensive and accurate but cannot offer any guarantees towards this end. The content of the website may be adapted, changed or supplemented at any time without any prior notification or communication.

The FCGB does its best to prevent any interruptions resulting from technical errors or failures as far as possible but cannot guarantee that the website will be free of any interruptions, failures or other malfunctions.

The FCGB cannot accept any responsibility or liability for the information provided on its website, or for the use to which it is put to or for any resulting loss.

LINKS TO OTHER WEBSITES

The website of the FCGB sometimes feature links to external websites. The FCGB may not be held liable for the content of these websites nor for the policy (such as privacy) applied on the websites.

Creating links to external websites does not imply an endorsement of or an association, partnership or relation with the establishments these websites present, BBAA and CANARA excepted.

USE OF INFORMATION

Visitors may freely use the information obtained directly from the website. This information may be distributed, provided it is accurately presented and the FCGB is cited as the source. The distribution, reproduction and use of information received from external websites referred to by the FCGB's website is managed by these third-party websites.

Where information obtained from the website of the FCGB is incorporated into documents or files to be offered to third parties for a charge (irrespective of the medium), the natural or legal person publishing the information should be notified beforehand that the information may also be consulted free of charge through the FCGB website.

E-MAIL DISCLAIMER

The FCGB uses e-mails to exchange information about or for fulfilling the tasks it has been assigned. The content of the FCGB's e-mails and attachments, if any, is intended solely for the person or organization to whom or to which it is addressed and, where appropriate, solely for the purpose or use mentioned therein. These e-mails may contain confidential information. Should you inadvertently receive an e-mail from the FCGB, please report this to the FCGB (info@fcgb-bgwf.be) and delete the e-mail.

The FCGB does its utmost to keep its e-mails free from viruses but should an e-mail sent from the FCGB nonetheless contain a virus or harmful attachment, the FCGB may not be held liable for this. The same provision applies to damage caused by the improper use of e-mail addresses and damage as a result of a delayed delivery or the loss of e-mails (both completely and in part).

COOKIES

Pursuant to article 129, 1° of the 13 June 2005 Law on electronic communications, the FCGB wishes to inform visitors to its website about the use of cookies. Cookies are small text files placed on the hard drives of the computers of website visitors. They contain information such as the visitor's language preference, so the person is not required to supply information again when revisiting the same website.

As a result of a visit to the FCGB website, a cookie may be saved on the visitor's hard drive. Cookies facilitate visits to the FCGB's website, while helping the FCGB to store user preferences and visitor information and keep track of user trends.

Visitors may change their cookie settings at any time (such as asking to be notified when cookies are sent to their computers, or refusing cookies) by altering their Internet browser settings.